Currently living in Southampton, New York, Troy Buckner is an accomplished professional in New York's art industry. An experienced private art dealer, he frequently handles many of the world's preeminent artworks, including works by Andy Warhol, Robert Rauschenberg, James Rosenquist, and Roy Lichtenstein. Troy Buckner serves prominent New York individuals such as leading museum curators and private collectors listed in the ARTnews Top 200 Collectors. He focuses on advising his clients on the acquisition of important works.

Prior to establishing his career as an art dealer, Troy Buckner served as the proprietor of Clark Fine Art, an art gallery in Southampton. He founded the gallery in 1998 with the intention of showcasing the region's best artists. Southampton is renowned for its rich art history; notable artists local to the area include Eric Fischl, Jackson Pollock, and Willem de Kooning. At Clark Fine Art, Mr. Buckner exhibited important works by Chuck Rose, Donald Sultan, Larry Rivers, John Chamberlain, and many other first-class artists. The exhibits achieved recognition from such international publications as Art in America.

Highly regarded in the New York art community, Troy Buckner continues to actively engage in local art events. A member of Southampton's Parrish Art Museum, he supports the institution's annual Midsummer Gala and regularly participates in art benefits, such as the Hamptons' Watermill Center Benefit and the Long House Reserve in East Hampton, New York. He also supports charitable organizations such as The American Red Cross.
