Ari Afilalo

Ari Afilalo

Email: afilaloari@gmail.com

The noted author, writer, professor, and philosopher, Ari Afilalo works as a Professor of Law at Camden faculty at the Rutgers Law School, for over 18 years.

He received a Bachelor's degree in Political Science and Government at the Harvard University. Afilalo also holds a J.D. magna cum laude from Boston University School of Law and an LL.M. from the Harvard Law School with specialization in International Law.

He constantly writes on many different topics, such as business transactions, international trade law and contracts. Moreover, Ari Afilalo is the author and co-author of number of books and publications. His most noted book is The New Global Trading Order: The Evolving State and the Future of Trade', a book about international trade law and institutions.

Ari Afilalo started his career in law as a clerk of Paul J. Liacos, the Chief Justice of the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts.

Over the course of his career, he was a part of Suffolk Law School in Boston and in the same time was practicing with cross-border commercial and financial transactions between Europe and the United States, and many other cases related to intellectual property matters in the New York City.

EXPERIENCE

University of Mississippi School of Law

1999-2000

Croft Assistant Professor of Law and International Studies

Taught courses in European Union law, public and private international law and banking law.

Harvard Law School

Legal Writing Instructor

He served as a legal writing instructor for graduate students at Harvard Law School.

Suffolk Law School in Boston

Adjunct Professor

Taught courses in international trade and intellectual property.

Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts

Law Clerk

Law clerk to Chief Justice Paul J. Liacos of the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts.

Camden faculty at the Rutgers Law School

2000

Professor of Law

For 18 years serves as a Professor of Law at the Camden faculty at the Rutgers Law School.

EDUCATION

Harvard Law School

LL.M.

Concentrated in international law.

Boston University School of Law

J.D. magna cum laude

Created using Resumonk - Online Resume Builder

SKILLS

International trade law, business transactions, and contracts.

Created using Resumonk - Online Resume Builder