Christopher Lowell Jackson, former agency owner of Allstate Insurance in Greensboro, Georgia, earned recognition for his work in the insurance field. The University of Georgia gave him its Bulldog 100 award, recognizing his agency as one of the hundred fastest-growing businesses owned by a University of Georgia graduate. In 2007, Allstate recognized Christopher Lowell Jackson as its Georgia Agent of the Year, and in that same year his agency was designated a Premier Service Agency for its high customer satisfaction rating. He also represented Allstate Insurance Company on its regional advisory board.

He has also taken a major role in teaching and speaking. He has spoken at three of Allstate's Insurance Leaders events, imparting his expertise on insurance practices to thousands of agents. He also helped record a video for agency owner training.

During his free time, Mr. Jackson likes traveling, sports, and spending time with his family. He has been to several European countries as well as China, Japan, and Australia. He considers his wife his best friend, and is a teacher in his church's youth group.
