A native of Franklin Lakes, New Jersey, Taylor Hallman graduated from Ramapo High School where he was a member of its swim team and captain of its championship tennis team. During high school, Taylor Hallman also attended the U.S. Naval Academy's annual tennis camp and supported nonprofit organizations such as Eva's Kitchen, a homeless shelter, and Habitat for Humanity.

Mr. Hallman continued to display his passion for community service while pursuing a bachelor's degree in business management at Washington College where, as a member of the Theta Chi fraternity, he helped plan and organize numerous fundraisers in Chestertown, Maryland. Since graduating in 2012, he has worked as a certified business continuity professional with Prudential Financial, where he provides advance planning services to businesses as a means of safeguarding against potentially-damaging incidents such as natural disasters and data center outages. Beyond his professional pursuits, he holds membership with the NYC Tennis League and enjoys skiing, biking, and CrossFit.
