Manuel Maximino - NY Financial Executive With Latin American Focus

Manuel Maximino is a seasoned financial executive with senior leadership experience spanning New York and London. Currently based in the United States, he serves as Deutsche Bank's head of Latin American derivatives and fixed income trading. Manuel Maximino's position builds on experience in the UK positioning the firm as a top banking presence in Latin American financial trading.

Mr. Maximino earned his bachelor's degree in economics at the Universidad de San Andres in Buenos Aires. He joined the Deutsche Bank team after winning a competition that attracted highly motivated candidates from throughout Brazil and Argentina.

Beginning his career as an Emerging Markets Division analyst, Mr. Maximino helped develop foreign exchange and credit products for the Latin America region. He set in place dedicated trading teams and expanded emerging market operational capacities in ways that drove performance.

Manuel Maximino stays informed on latest trends in the financial sphere and maintains a longstanding interest in psychology and behavioral economics; he has presented publicly on such topics as the history of sovereign debts.
