Having earned nearly 20 years of experience as a developer, Scott Fish presently serves as the principal of UP Development, a company that handles a range of retail construction development projects and workout projects throughout the American Southeast. For over two decades, UP has created retail centers anchored by national chains such as Lowe's, Meijer, Kroger, Toys "R" Us, and Babies "R" Us. Scott Fish's responsibilities as a developer at UP include working with retailers and their financial partners to design, permit, and complete projects in a timely and cost-effective manner.

In addition to his experience in the field of retail development, Mr. Fish has also performed duties as a developer on a number of philanthropic construction projects. Working closely with the Nashville Predators hockey team, he helped to create the 110,000-square-foot A-Game arena in Franklin, Tennessee. Strongly involved with his community, he also supports the efforts of the Franklin Noon Rotary Club and the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association.
