Since 2015, Edward Espinal has led New Jersey-based Cash Flow Partners, using his expertise in the world of corporate finance and credit building to help businesses of any size get the funds they need to grow or restructure. Some of the projects he has worked on with Cash Flow Partners have involved establishing start-up funding for entrepreneurs, securing capital for large organizations, and raising funds for real estate development. Edward Espinal has built an extensive network of lending and investment entities to help companies regardless of their current credit history or size, and charges no fee if a business cannot get the funds necessary to grow. Much of his work includes the tracking of lender trends and requirements, ensuring that any business approaching Cash Flow Partners can connect with a lender of the appropriate size and inclination.

When not working with Cash Flow Partners, Edward Espinal enjoys music, baseball, and philanthropy. Like many from the Dominican Republic, he has a powerful passion for baseball, which he played as a youth and encourages his sons to partake in as well. Also once a professional musician, he still uses music for emotional regulation and considers it a very important element of his life.
