Patricia M. Tracey Founded and Leads Housing Nonprofit R.E.A.C.H.

Patricia M. Tracey serves as chief executive officer of Real Estate Education and Community Housing (R.E.A.C.H.), Inc., of Palm Beach Gardens, Florida. In her leadership roles, she guides the nonprofit organization in aiding people interested in buying homes for the first time while also delivering the kind of financial support and education that helps current homeowners retain their homes. Since establishing R.E.A.C.H. in 2006, Patricia M. Tracey has saved hundreds of homes from foreclosure by securing grant funding through corporate sponsors and public organizations like the United States Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Active in the real estate community, Patricia M. Tracey belongs to such professional organizations as the National Association of Realtors and the National Low Income Housing Coalition. Her background in real estate includes serving in senior executive positions with mortgage providers, and she currently works as a real estate agent through ERA Home Run Real Estate.
