Mr. Givens served as an inspector general officer at the Air Combat Command Legacy for Langley Air Force Base in Virginia prior to becoming the president of RPG Consulting. His primary responsibilities in this role involved overseeing combat preparations for over 130,000 Air Force personnel and performing Course of Action analyses for future development ventures. He also became a deputy director of operations for the Seoul-headquartered US Forces Korea in 2010, during which time he coordinated with the Republic of Korea Ministry of Defense and directed United Nations military forces.

Robert P. Givens' accomplishments over the course of his career range from utilizing historical analyses for governmental offices to assembling qualified teams in light of the absence of trained personnel. In addition, he implemented innovative syllabuses that increased training qualities by 50 percent at a reduced cost while overseeing F-16 pilots as a US Air Force director.
