Ryan Vucina Oversees All Aspects of High-End Construction Projects

An extensively experienced construction professional, Ryan Vucina serves as Chief Operations Manager for Vucina Construction, Inc., in Carmel, California. Ryan Vucina manages all dimensions of mixed-use and luxury residential building developments, including calculating initial project estimates, obtaining municipal permits, deliberating with architects to resolve design issues, and supervising the work of contractors.

Exemplary of his work in his current position, he directed the concurrent construction of three custom-designed luxury residences with collective expenses of $21 million. To complete the three homes, he oversaw a 150-member construction crew working at shoreline properties spanning a 45-mile radius.

Along with his duties as Chief Operations Manager, Ryan Vucina acts as Vucina Construction's stand-in President and CEO. He has provided leadership that has helped the company win honors for its work on projects such as the restoration of the Green Mansion, a historic property that served as the first headquarters of the Boy Scouts of America. He also contributed to the company's construction of the first facility for Alzheimer's care, for which it was honored by the City of Monterey, California and cited in the Monterey Herald.

As an undergraduate student at Monterey Peninsula College, Ryan Vucina studied business management. A supporter of educational opportunities in the United States for foreign students, he has sponsored exchange students from Germany and Tonga.
